APPROVES OF WEEKS PLAN.

Daniels Confers With Senator Regarding Use of Warships.

Secretary Daniels and Senator Weeks conferred today over the resolution introduced in the Senate by the latter asking for information as to the feasibility of using naval vessels for commercial purposes in time of peace. Mr. Daniels is in complete accord with the Weeks plan, and suggested its introduction into the Senate, officials at the Navy Department are now figuring on the cost of operation and the advisability of devoting to commercial use the old cruisers Columbia and Minneapolis and the scout cruisers Birmingham, Salem and Chester.

"I am in favor of any project looking to the greater usefulness of the navy in time of peace," said Secretary Daniels.

MISS ELEANOR WILSON VISITS NEW YORK SHOPS

Is Carefully Shielded From Gotham's Curious in Trousseau Quest.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Miss Eleanor Wilson, daughter of the President and Mrs. Wilson, yesterday continued her shopping tour here. She traveled from the Waldorf-Astoria, to the 5th avenue shops and back under the guard of a secret service man. No President of the United States was more carefully shielded from the curiosity of the public and the eyes of casual shoppers than the youngest member of the White House family, who is soon to become a bride.

Everywhere Miss Wilson went, accompanied by her cousin, Mrs. John Wilson of Philadelphia, the secret service man went, too. While driving from shop to shop he occupied a seat beside the chauffeur, and when Miss Wilson and her relative entered one of the 5th avenue temples of fashion, the guard kept watch outside until she emerged, and then hurried his charge into the automobile and helped to shield her from the eyes of pedestrians who chanced to recognize the pretty daughter of the President and paused to look again.

Orders Hats and Dresses. Miss Wilson, who is soon to be married to William Gibbs McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, has already accomplished a great deal toward providing herself with a suitable wardrobe to begin life as the wife of a member of the official set in Washington. She has ordered several of her dresses and hats from the couturiers who have been invited to her home, and she has also ordered a number of hats and dresses from the designers and makers who have been invited to her home.

The wedding dress is still to be selected, but before Miss Wilson starts for Washington tomorrow the designers and makers who have been invited to her home will have completed the wedding outfit of a White House bride, even though this bride, like her sister, avoids ostentation.

Expect Frequent Trips From Capital. Miss Wilson will include in her troussau the usual number of street suits, afternoon and evening dresses, and because of her fondness for tennis and other outdoor sports she probably will have a number of attractive sportswear of all kinds.

The troussau shopping will keep Miss Wilson busy until near the wedding day, which probably will be some time in June, and it also will mean that she will make frequent trips from Washington to this city.
